

Psalm 80:11-19

Tune: Geneva, 1562

$\text{♩} = 75$

5. Far as the sea its shoots ex - tend - ed,
6. O God of hosts, hear our pe - ti - tion;
7. Our foes have burnt your vine in mad - ness,
8. No more shall we for - sake your grac - es;

and towards the riv - er branch - es tend - ed.
from heav - en keep us in your vi - sion.
cut - ting it down to our great sad - ness.
re - vive us and we'll sing your prais - es.

Why then have you de - stroyed its wall that its fruit might be plucked by all?
Pro - tect this vine which by your grace you once have plant - ed in this place;
May they soon per - ish at your face; may your right hand rest by your grace
O God of hosts, to us re - store your sav - ing love, and turn once more

The for - est boars have rav - aged it;
de - fend the son of man whom you
up - on the son of man you love,
your face whose light out - shines the sun's,

beasts of the field have sav - aged it.
have made, and all his strength re - new.
whom you have strength - ened from a - bove.
that you might save your chos - en ones.

The musical score consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lower staff is in bass clef. The melody is primarily composed of quarter notes and half notes, with some rests. The lyrics are aligned with the notes in the upper staff.
